Overview

Aims and Scope

Berichte zur Wissenschaftsgeschichte / History of Science and Humanities is devoted to the history of science in the broad German sense of the term "Wissenschaft": The journal is open to national and international original articles on all areas of the history of science and humanities, and neighboring subjects and thereby strives to contribute to an integrated history that encompasses the natural sciences as well as the humanities and the social sciences.

The history of science is a dynamic field, characterized not least by constantly productive work on the boundaries of its own object. During past decades, it has thus opened up many new areas of study: from fields previously excluded from the history of science as "pseudoscience", such as alchemy, to the "artisanal knowledge" of early modern craftsmen, to the humanities and the social sciences. Berichte zur Wissenschaftsgeschichte / History of Science and Humanities actively contributes to this productive dynamic by providing a forum for discussion through thematic special issues.

Online ISSN: 1522-2365

How to cite: To make sure that references to this journal are correctly recorded and resolved (for example in CrossRef, PubMed, or ISI Web of Knowledge), please use the following abbreviated title in any citations: "Ber. Article types

JBC publishes the following article types: Research Articles, Accelerated Communications, JBC Reviews, Meeting Reports, Letters to the Editor, and Corrections, as well as article types that publish by invitation only. Please find all the descriptions below.

محدوديتها

Full-length articles and reviews should not exceed 4,200 words from introduction through discussion (not including references, tables, and figure legends).

Brief reports should not exceed 2,500 words from introduction through discussion.

Case reports may not be submitted to the journal. In rare instances, brief reports that include case report information will be considered for publication. The main criterion for consideration will be that, in addition to the clinical description of a case or cases, the report includes investigative research that advances the field of rheumatology by, e.g., providing a key insight into disease mechanism or outcomes. These should be submitted in brief report format, with a Patients and Methods section (including, but not limited to, description of the case or cases), a Results section, and a Discussion section.

Peer Review

Peer review assignments and procedures

ACR Open Rheumatology follows a single-blind peer review process. Authors are asked to suggest potential reviewers of their manuscript. If there are individuals they would prefer not to review their manuscripts, they may also indicate. Editors will consider these suggestions but are not bound by them.

ACR Open Rheumatology requests that peer reviewers adhere to a set of basic principles during the peer-review process in research publication. To be a qualified reviewer, please keep in mind that you should not have previously reviewed a submitted manuscript or have a financial, personal, or intellectual conflict of interest that may diminish your ability to provide a fair review. Please refer to the Ethical Guidelines for Peer Reviewers prepared by the Committee on Publication Ethics, which provides further information on how to be objective and constructive in the peer-review process.

In-house submissions, i.e. papers authored by the Editors or Associate Editors of ACR Open Rheumatology, will be sent to Editors unaffiliated with the author or institution and monitored carefully to ensure there is no peer review bias.

Wolters Kluwer Medknow provides for long-term digital preservation through two primary partnerships, Portico and CLOCKSS.

Portico is a leading digital preservation service worldwide. The content is preserved as an archival version and is not publically accessible via Portico, but is provided when required under specific conditions, such as discontinuation of the collection or catastrophic failure of the website.

CLOCKSS will enable any library to maintain their own archive of content from Wolters Kluwer Medknow and other publishers, with minimal technical effort and using cheaply available hardware.

Ahead of Print policy

Articles published online under the Ahead of Print model are considered published and can be cited and quoted using the DOI as the reference source. Wolters Kluwer Medknow has a policy that changes will not be made after publication of an article without following accepted procedures for making corrections to the scientific record.

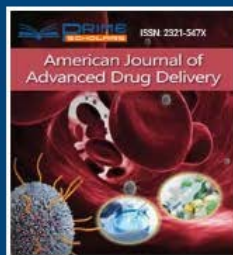

Advertisements

While advertisements are crucial to this journal to be able to keep all content free for everyone, ethical considerations are in place to ensure the integrity of the journal and its content:

- "Pop-up" and "banner" ads appear on a random, rotating basis. The advertiser has no control or input over the pages where their ads appear.
- The Editorial Board has full and final approval over the content of all advertisements.
